Introduction to Home Economics – Philosophy & Practice

OHEA is accepting registration for its self-study course Introduction to Home Economics – Philosophy and Practice. The course is designed for those wishing to become Professional Home Economists in Ontario and who have not the necessary professional requirement for a credit course or equivalent on the philosophy and practice of home economics as part of their undergraduate education. The course will be of interest to current members who wish to review and update their knowledge of the home economics practice and philosophy. OHEA recognizes that professional practice depends on what each individual brings to that practice. What we do depends very much on who we are, the way we work with others, the values and beliefs that guide our practice. An important part of being and becoming a professional is to become conscious of who we are, what assumptions and beliefs guide us, how we perceive others and our relationships with them, and what has influenced us as we traveled to this point, at this time, in this place.

Course Requirements

The self-study course will require reading about key ideals, ideas and traditions in the profession; analyzing your beliefs, ideals, and practices; reflecting and developing action plans to become an active self-directed professional. This course is designed for you to complete at your own pace.

Each of the five sections contains readings and reflective questions. A journal of your response to the questions and a culminating assignment will be mailed to the OHEA Examiner upon completion of the course.

The goals of the self-study are to provide you with opportunity to:

- ✓ Demonstrate an understanding of the history and practice of home economics
- ✓ Examine home economics as a profession
- ✓ Identify current issues and respective action plans for the practice of home economics
- ✓ Develop a philosophy of home economics

Successful graduates will receive a certificate and be recognized at the Annual General Meeting of OHEA.

Fees

Materials – $30 ($15 is refundable upon return of the materials... a participant may take one copy of the materials for personal use under the current copyright)

Evaluation – $185 (for those participants who wish to receive recognition from OHEA for successful completion of this course)

To register, complete the registration and mail with your cheque to OHEA.
